HARMONY OF FARM PLANK

The farm plank which the republican national convention put into the Hoover platform is a real pledge in every word. Senator McNary, co-author of the McNary-Haugen bill was wholly within the book, when following a conference with Mr. Hoover he expressed his satisfaction with the plank and confidence in its promises.

Contrary to the view of those who are inclined to picture the east and the west as at swords points, one who sat with the committee on resolutions at Kansas City, declared when it was all over that he felt proud of both his party and its vision because of the spirit with which eastern and western members approached this problem. The committee spent forty-eight hours drafting a platform and almost thirty hours were devoted to discussion of agricultural conditions. While many of the men who sat around that board under Senator Smoot had different candidates for the presidency, they gave themselves wholeheartedly to the effort of framing a plank not for candidate and party but for national peace and well-being.

The records of the committee will show that at the close the advocates of the McNary-Haugen solution of the farm problem rose in their places to credit to the men who had worked with them, but could not agree with them, true-blooded American sincerity and patriotism. They also thanked them for the manner in which they had tried to accept their viewpoint. For over seventy years, resolutions committees in nineteen conventions have met to draft platform planks, but it is agreed by all that no resolutions committee where men stood sharply opposed to each other was ever carried on so finely, with such harmony and with such ambition to serve as the 1928 resolutions committee at Kansas City.

Criticism is sometimes painful to listen to, but it should be listened to all the same; nothing is more useful; nothing helps more in developing talent and character. —Modesto News-Herald.

The town of Gnaabone, Ind., is to have its name changed. We suggest Liverandons. —The Lafayette Journal and Courier.

The office cynic says fish take vacations, just as he does, and coincidentally. —Detroit News.

They have opened a "five and ten cent" grocery in New York. But nobody has yet had the nerve to propose a five and ten meat market.

Being a delegate to a convention must be a tough job in China, where they have so many factions.

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME

Julie Says—

THERE is no lack of variety in gorgeous clothes for vacation time. And today's sketch is of one suitable for a host of occasions—for the beach, for yachting, for boating or anything where there are social activities near the water—everything except getting into it. This little costume has a flannel double-breasted jacket of Independence blue and a white flannel skirt. With it is worn a sweater with a crew neck. White shoes, a blue or white coat, what could be smarter in summer time any place any time of day? —W.P.

THEY BEAT HIM TO IT
Husband—I say, if the worst comes to the worst I suppose we can go and live with your parents?
Wife—Not a chance. They're already living with their parents.

BEAUTY

By LAURA LANE

Unless you want to find yourself next fall with a dry, dandruff-infected scalp, and brittle, broken hair, you will do well to watch your step—or, more accurately, your hair—during the next few months.

The delights of a strenuous game of tennis in the blazing sun, of invigorating swims in the ocean and of long motor rides will be forgotten when autumn comes in the fearful contemplation of ravaged tresses.

Strong sunlight will leave your hair streaky and bleached and dry out the natural oils of your scalp. You do not protect it with a hat or a bonnet for tennis and golf. Salt water makes the finest locks sticky and unmanageable and necessitates frequent shampoos in fresh, soft water. Even if your hair is clipped short, and you go to dry on the beach in the sun, wear one or even two tightly fitting bathing caps when you have your swim. To have your hair swept back by the breeze as you drive along the country roads in the sun is a glorious sensation, but you will come back from your ride to find an accumulation of dust on your scalp that no amount of brushing can remove.

Although sunlight and air in moderation are good for the hair and scalp, a head covering for protection against sun, dust and salt water will help to keep your hair in a healthy condition during the warm months.

One expert on the care of the hair cites as one factor in men's tendency to baldness the habit of rushing off to a sunny tennis court or golf links, with their scalp unusually hot, into an ice-cold shower. This sudden change from extreme heat to intense cold contracts all the ducts and tissues, even to the blood vessels, and some hair follicles are put out of action.

"Is this post-war stuff?" "Absolutely. One good sized drink of that is a guaranteed forerunner of a battle of some sort."

Our latest Scotch importation tells of how Sandy MacPherson decided to leave school because he had to pay attention.

DOING HIS BEST

Wait a time prohibition officer you're making. A lot you'll do to rid this country of liquor.

Well, dear Sir—I'm doing my—hic—best!

"Why do you squeeze your girl so tight?" "Some one has said that the temperature increase with pressure."

"She's a versatile comedian, isn't she?" "Yes, she imitates well; in fact they say she can take off anything."

When a girl says, "You're so different," you know she has a experimenting."

Fosh: Doc, I can't sleep at night.
Doc: No, you roll around.
Fosh: No, but my roomie does.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."

Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless. Count on nujol as your best friend. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every drugist has this famous medicine.

Three Rebels Slain When Train Wrecks

Passengers were toppled from their berths when all but two coaches of the train left the track. A fifteen minute panic in the train followed while guards held off the attack of the swarming rebels. In a second attack by the insurgents three rebels were taken captive and later executed.

GRETA NEVER WEARS SAME GOWN TWICE

That is Greta Garbo's advice to the woman who wants to appear well-gowned all the time. "There is nothing more deadly than the wearing of the same type of gown the year around," says Miss Garbo, who is now playing the stellar role of The Divine Woman, which is being shown as the feature attraction of the Richmond Theatre.

There is no doubt that the clothes affect the wearer mentally and, if you wear the same type the year around, your mind, as well as your personality, gets into a rut. "It is true that one sort of beauty is best offered by a certain type of gown. Some people wear sports clothing better than any other models and it is a temptation for them to want to because it is the most becoming, wear such clothing all the time. But that is bad psychology. You should be sure that each year's wardrobe includes a variety of models, feminine evening gowns, dainty afternoon frocks, and tailored sports models."

"We of the screen know how clothes affect us. In 'The Divine Woman' I play the first part of the picture in simple peasant clothes. Later on I wear gorgeous creations and it is amazing to me how my mental attitude changes with my wardrobe. To a lesser degree this affects the non-professional woman and because of this a great variety of clothing should be worn."

"The Divine Woman" is a screen adaptation of the Gladys Unger play 'Starlight' in which Bonnie Keane was starred on the speaking stage. Lars Hanson has one of the featured male roles and Lowell Sherman the other.

The picture was directed by Victor Seastrom.

The Professor, leader of a gang of crooks, believing that she knows the hiding-place of the money, tries to force it from her. She is saved by Chuck White, a member of the gang, with whom she is in love. Learning that the gang is out to kill Chuck for double-crossing, she tries to warn him, but collapses and is taken to the hospital. When she recovers she hurries to the antique store where the Professor has his headquarters. The police are watching the place.

CHAPTER 21

For the fraction of a second the two groups stood gazing at each other, pistol pointed towards pistol, and then with a bellow of rage the Mug leaped forward, flinging himself onto Cowles, bearing him down to the floor. Lefty met his man, and with one knockout blow sent him flying backwards, but another bluecoat was already upon him, beating him to the right about. A third officer bore down upon the Mug, and the three men grappled frantically. The Professor was already upon his feet, forgetful of his injury, fighting madly, his clenched fists pummeling their way into the midst of the policemen. The room went black.

An automatic spattered its rain of terror. Little, bright, flashing lights cut the air. A sudden gleam of a flashlight glowed like an erratic firefly over the room, now sweeping this corner, now that. A crash of falling furniture. A body dropping to the floor. A sharp scream. Two forms pitched into each other, and went to the floor. Mangled curses, cries of pain, shouts of warning!

Suddenly the room was flooded with light. Cowles stood, his hand on the switch, his eyes fixed, carefully scrutinizing the melee. There in one corner were Chuck and Rose. Over in another corner was Lefty, his hands plioned behind him, an officer holding guard. In the chair at the Professor's side, Simpson's gun pointed at his head, his hands securely hand-cuffed to the detective's. Another bluecoat pressed his pistol against the Mug's back. Across the floor sprawled Sparrow nursing his arm, while back towards the wall a dark figure loomed, guarded by two policemen.

The long conflict was ended. It was over. A time of calm now, according to Cowles, until he would have the whole story. And so with his pistol still covering any member of the gang who might try for a break, he spoke:

"Well, his voice was cold and harsh, yet tinged with some element of glory that he felt in the capture of the band.

"I don't think we got much more niggerin' to do," Simpson broke in. "What have you got to say, Mr. Daniels?" He had recognized at last the figure he had seen on the street; the dark form concealed by the shadow in the corner of the room.

"For Gawd's sake! De cashier!" Mug exploded, his eyes popping.

"Well, I guess the game's up," The man addressed by Simpson turned and looked at his guards. "I suppose it's up to me now." He shivered as though chilled by some winter wind. "The girl and the boy know nothing. Daniels pointed towards Chuck and Rose. "I can vouch for that. You see, I happen to know just a little more about this than anyone else here."

"Keep quiet," The words came from the Professor's mouth with a little hissing sound. "You damned fool!"

"No, not quite," Daniels returned. "This thing has weighed too long on my mind. I'm ready to talk, as I believe you'd call it down at the Central Station," he clutched at the table with his hands, steadying himself. "I am the one responsible for the money that you have been looking for."

"I thought so," Simpson looked up, his eyes sparkling with delight. "Didn't I say so all along?" He turned to Cowles with an air of triumph.

"Aw, shut up," Cowles returned. "You've got nothing to brag about. Go on, Daniels," he ordered.

"Very well, then," The man bowed slightly, a cynical smile twisting one corner of his mouth. "It may interest you to know that there never was any money in that bag."

Every member of the gang turned in sudden amazement at the man's words. No money in the bag! Ask for four weeks they had been madly searching for the lost coin. No money in the bag!

There were sharp intakes of breath, short gasps, and then a voice rising above it all: "No money in the bag? You lousy hardy!" The Professor shrieked, jumping to his feet. But the hand cut sharply on his wrists and the pain in his leg made him fall back with a groan.

Lindy May Pilot Gene

They say that Gene Tunney planned to demoralize Jack Dempsey before the Philadelphia fight by flying to the battle ground from Stroudsburg, Pa., in an airplane.

Another airplane trip may figure in Tunney's impending fight with Tom Heene, the Harp Rock, from down under.

In all probability, Tunney will leave this pleasant spot in a hydroplane piloted by your old friend Ed Charles Lindbergh, or Commander Richard Byrd.

If you must know the truth, I think that Gene would thoroughly enjoy an airplane ride with Lindy.

He and Lindbergh met through a mutual friend, a Mr. B. Kerville. Tunney has told me that he thinks Lindy is a real kid.

"He gives you the impression," said Gene, "that he is always about to break into a smile. Just a regular fellow completely unspooled, although at the time he was a bit weary of the crowds."

From what Tunney has said of Lindy you can tell that he enjoyed the meeting immensely, and if Lindy pilots Tunney to the battle ground you can bet that the heavy-weight champion of the world would derive his greatest thrill from the voyage.

Commander Byrd, the Virginia Gentleman of the Air, is an intimate friend of Tunney's.

This blissful summer resort, nestled near the cool waters of Lake Pleasant, has experienced many proud sensations since Gene Tunney first came here to train, fulfilling a pledge he had made to Bill Osborne, his machine gun instructor in the war. Yet now would compare with the sensation that would be imparted if Colonel Lindbergh or Commander Byrd were to drop from the blue skies on July 26.

That, my brethren, would be the thrill of a lifetime.

The most marked change in Gene Tunney is in his appearance as a cordial, smiling host to newspaper men, whom he once disliked heartily.

No one knows just what brought about the transformation, but it

TUNNEY WILL TRY TO K. O. TOM HEENEY

SPECULATOR, N. Y., July 18.—(U.P.)—While Gene Tunney is maintaining silence about his ring tactics against Tom Heene, in the Yankee Stadium one week from Thursday, he is giving every indication that he is going after a knockout. The heavy-weight champion is becoming more aggressive in his workouts. He pounds sparring partners and invites them to pound back. Tunney apparently is out to prove that he is not a "punchless" champion. Gene is not forgetting to develop his other asset. His speedy legs are being hardened by nine miles of road work daily and he is keeping his eyes sharp by a lot of clever boxing.

MORGAN KEEPS TITLE AFTER BLOODY SCRAP

EBBETS FIELD, N. Y., July 18.—(U.P.)—Tod Morgan of Seattle retained his junior lightweight title here tonight by defeating Eddie "Cannonball" Martin of Brooklyn in 15 rounds. Morgan won the decision in one of the bloodiest fights seen here this season.

Morgan fought the greatest battle of his career to defend his title against the gorilla like rushes of Martin. Three crushing blows and hard rushes of the fighters produced a brutal spectacle for the 20,000 spectators who jammed Ebbets Field.

Morgan weathered a terrific barrage of blows from the club-like arms of the rugged Italian and carried on to retain his title for the second time this season against Martin.

Postponed five times because of rainy weather, the bout proved to be one of the most stirring held in many months.

Morgan left the ring a ghastly sight. His face was smeared with blood. He had a deep gash over his left eye and a knob as large as a hen's egg over his right. Blood streamed from his nose and from behind his right ear during most of the bout.

The champion was so exhausted that he was hardly able to stagger from the ring to talk over the radio. Morgan's words were half smothered and those nearby were unable to understand what he was trying to say.

With the President Roosevelt due to dock at Amsterdam Friday morning the athletes began assembling their equipment today for the temporary disembarkation. The team will go ashore for a two day workout and then will return to make quarters on the ship.

SPECULATOR, N. Y., July 18.—(U.P.)—A. V. Bobb of New York and William Winston, a pilot, were seriously injured late today when the plane in which they flew here to watch Gene Tunney in training crashed into a clump of pine trees and was completely demolished on the attempted return flight.

Los Angeles scored twice in the first half of the ninth to break a tie and beat the Missions, 5 to 7, after each team had taken turns in being ahead. Five runs of the Angels in the second inning helped them a great deal.

Another contest was not decided until the ninth inning. Oakland beat Portland 6 to 5 by scoring once in the last of the ninth. Portland had tied the score with one run in the eighth inning.

Advertisements make neighbors of a nation

The Yankee clipper-ships are sailing phantom seas. The western two-gun man has retired to the movies, and the southern plantation has been subdivided. The old sectional distinctions have passed into tradition.

Where there was North, South, and West, there is now one people. Those old barriers of distance and prejudice have been worn down by many uniting forces: Railroads, radio, automobiles, telephones, newspapers, magazines, Advertising.

These are the things that have united America into a nation of neighbors. You have the same automobile as the chap a half-dozen states away. You both eat the same advertised foods, smoke the same tobaccos, enjoy concerts from the air with the same radio sets. You have a lot of things in common.

Advertisements give you and your neighbors in all the forty-eight states the same chance to know and obtain new things as soon as they are ready. Through advertisements, you learn of a thousand devices that save you labor, increase your comfort, and help you enjoy life generally. They give you a broad panoramic view of this modern age we live in.

Read the advertisements—your neighbors are reading them too

OLDSMOBILE CARAVAN TO DISPLAY CAR

As a part of one of the most unusual and comprehensive programs ever undertaken in this field, a caravan of all the new Oldsmobile models will arrive in Richmond today to spend the day here to carry out a program being arranged by R. H. Miller, the Oldsmobile dealer. Headquarters will be maintained at the Miller Motor Sales Co., 333 11th street.

The caravan, in fact, will constitute a miniature automobile show, for it includes a beautiful cut-out Oldsmobile chassis, showing thousands of dollars and identical with those used at the New York and Chicago automobile shows.

Paul J. Feely, special representative of the Oldsmobile factory, who is in charge of the caravan, is accompanied by Art Davidson, wholesale representative of the San Francisco branch for the territory.

RURAL IMPORTANCE SEEN
An interesting view of the importance attached to the leading centers away from metropolitan cities by this division of General Motors is given by Feely, a well known automobile salesman and advertising specialist, explaining the purpose of the caravan.

"Since the introduction of the new models," said Feely, "Oldsmobile has been in the process of keeping pace with the times. Consequently only a very few points have been able to display the complete line. The importance of centers like Mountain View are being developed as such important points. Thomas M. Ray, San Francisco branch manager, sent out the caravan so that all sections of his territory would have an opportunity to view these cars.

"Increasing production also makes it possible for Ray to expand his dealer organizations."

Notable among the Oldsmobile innovations are an automatic fuel pump; rubber mounted engine and insulated body mounting which eliminate all metal to metal contact; ability to attain a speed of 40 to 45 miles an hour in second and more than 75 in high; hydraulic shock absorbers all around; and complete dashboard information disks including a water temperature gauge.

QUICKER TRANSIT DEMAND

Feely presented an interesting analysis of present day conditions in which modern motor transportation is continuously influencing rural life. A realization of the increasing importance of and necessity for quicker, and more efficient transportation led the Oldsmobile factory to bring out an entirely new automobile in its present models, which has earned for this car the significant sobriquet of the "fine car of low price."

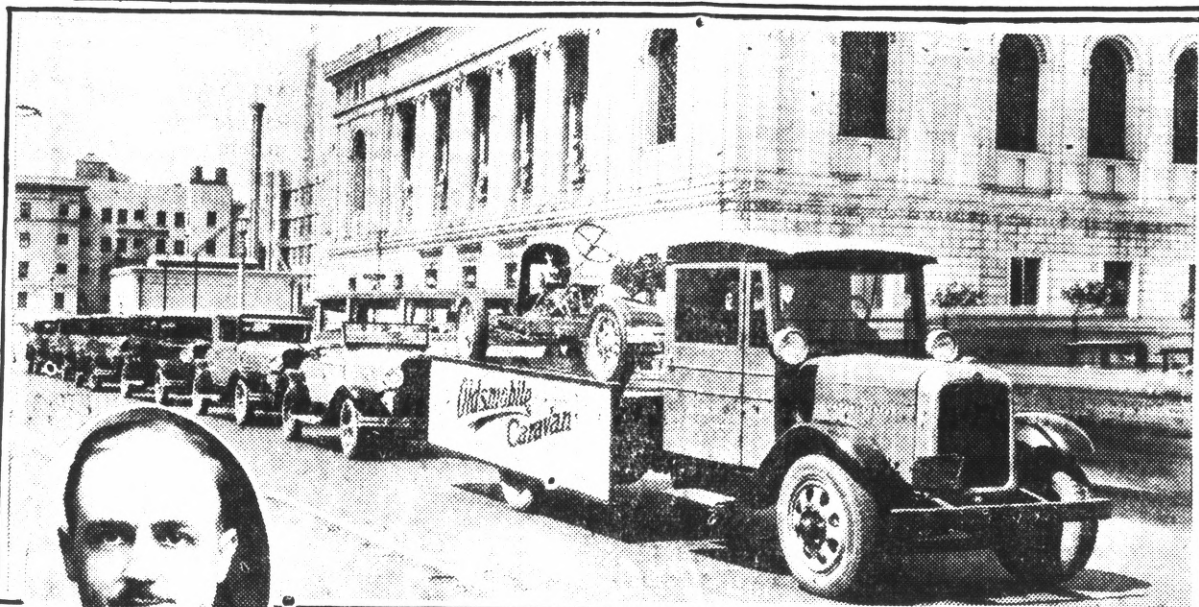

"You have right before you," explained Feely, "an object illustration of what I mean. The dramatic economic change in which speed and efficiency are raising the barriers of space is going on daily."

NEWSPAPER LOCAL FACTORS

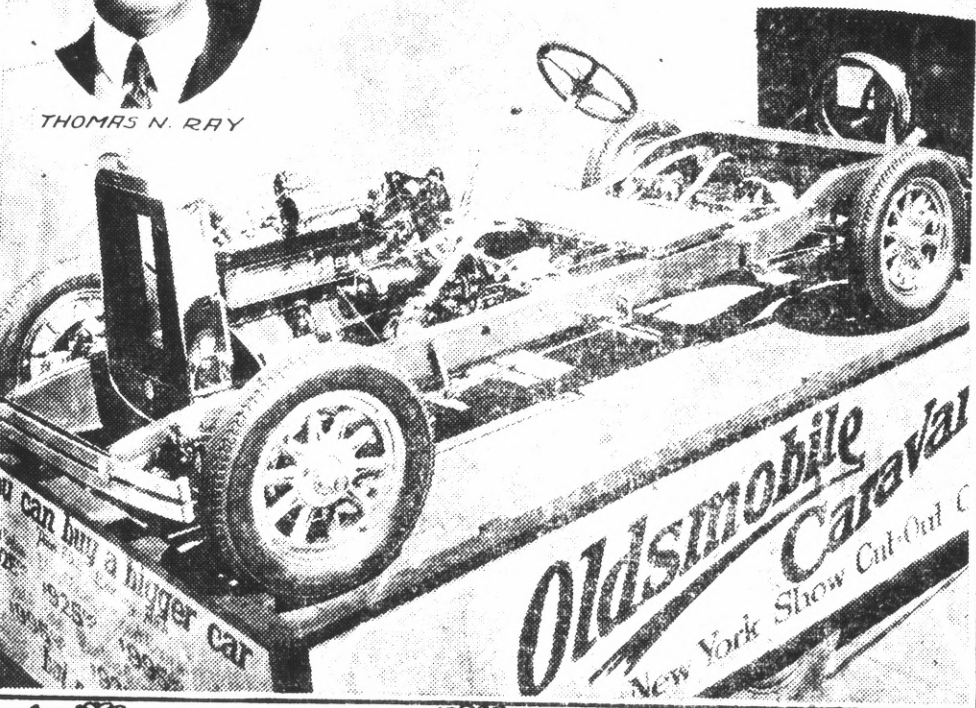

"Take the Record-Herald for instance, as always, newspapers are the pioneers in lighting the road of progress. Bound the sphere of Richmond influence and you will learn that it coincides remarkably close to the area in which the Record-Herald is read. Through speedy transportation, no longer confined to steel rails, the paper is able to reach out beyond the confines of the strictly urban area."

"This gives the local newspaper a distinct advantage. It permits of finer service to its reader and brings the price of its valuable advertising space to a scale where very wide-awake merchant should avail himself of this powerful

SALES MESSENGER

"That is why Oldsmobile, like other divisions of General Motors, encourage its dealers to advertise in their local papers consistently and aggressively, because even a superior product benefits immeasurably by this life blood of modern merchandising. Literally millions of dollars are spent in newspapers annually advertising General Motors products."

Oldsmobile Set High Record
"And just as the newspapers have pointed the way to more scientific merchandising, faster and more economical transportation has put the farmer closer to his market and his trading center, an advantage alike to himself and the merchant."

The new Oldsmobile has been making rather sensational sales records nationally, according to Feely, and California has been in the vanguard of these activities. Each succeeding month has shattered the previous record, he said, with May showing an increase of 145 per cent in registrations in the state.

"The factory," continued Feely, "closed June by establishing the largest six month shipment record in its history, and in the face of this great increase has entered July with more than 7,000 unfilled orders."

ment for those guilty of his murder."

The crowds acknowledged the sentiment with hands raised twice in salute.

President Calles previously had issued a statement:

"The president shares this profound sorrow with the nation and invites the inhabitants of the federal district to pay the ultimate tribute of admiration to the illustrious dead by accompanying the body from the National Palace to the station from which it will be conducted to Sonora."

"I have suffered such a shock that I am completely stunned by the death of Obregon and the transcendental importance to the country as represented by all the hopes and ambitions of the Mexican people," Calles had said earlier.

In his estimation, the country has lost its greatest representative. It is useless to say that the nation suffers an irreparable loss in the death of its noblest representative."

While Obregon's body lay in state in the presidential palace, thousands of unwept mourners filed past the flag-draped casket as cadets from the military school stood rigid, a guard of honor.

President Calles, who had gone immediately to San Angel, where Obregon was murdered, to interrogate the assassin, one Juan Escudillo of uncertain antecedents, took prompt action to avert violence. He ordered troops throughout the republic to remain in barracks, ready to deal with disturbances. None was reported.

The police were gilling the assassin today, hoping he would divulge the names of accomplices, if there were any. They announced he "was talking" and that "further arrests are expected momentarily." The murderer's only comment made public was that he was guilty and had killed Obregon because he "wanted Christ to be king and reign completely, not partially."

SAN FRANCISCO, July 18.—(U.P.)—Mayor James Rolph, J. C. of San Francisco, one of the closest friends of Alvaro Obregon in the United States, today eulogized the president-elect of Mexico, whose untimely death was mourned throughout the world.

"Obregon was a devoted friend of the United States, whose ambition was to promote friendlier and more cordial relations with us," Rolph said.

able at this time from the viewpoint of the United States because of the situation with regard to the Lamont-Paul financial agreement for funding Mexico's debt by American bankers. Mexico has been unable to meet the payments scheduled but Calles has been striving to organize his revenues and budget to come as close as possible to the stipulated payment and American financial interests would be apprehensive of any internal disturbances at this time which might further endanger Mexican payments. Such disorders would immediately bring a pressure upon Washington from American bankers and this is one of the compelling reasons for the feeling here that revolution in Mexico must be prevented at all costs.
